

Anansi and the Big Feed

Anansi the spider has a big fat gut.

He is vain
and glad.

Anansi can see
seven villages.

The grub is vast, and he is keen.

Anansi is avid for the lot,
but Weaver Bird can see it.

He invents a grand
plan.

Snip! He cuts the cord into seven
bits.

He visits seven spots and hands a man a cord. He ties
the seven ends
to his waist.

He sits and waits, and he has vivid plans for vast grub.

The pots sit
hot at the
seven villages.

The men grip
the cords and
tug!

Tug, tug, tug!
The cords drag
Anansi up.

He spins, and it is havoc.

The cords grip his waist fast,
and Anansi is a sad victim.

The cords go
slack. Anansi drops and cuts a
divot in the mud.

His gut is a slim,
slim waist.

He visits the
seven villages,
but the grub is spent.

Weaver Bird
spots his wee
slim waist.

The kid is avid for a vast feed, but Gran grins and steps in.

Anansi and the Big Feed

Anansi the spider has a big, round belly, and he loves it more than anything. When he hears about a huge feast happening in seven villages all on the same day, he cannot bear to pick just one. So he comes up with a bold plan involving long cords tied to every village at once, but can he really be in seven places at the same time? Written for Jolly Phonics classrooms (Group 5: v /v/), this book practices words like 'vast', 'avid', 'visits', 'havoc', 'vivid'.

Phonics Focus: <v>
