DO NOT GO IN

AN UNOFFICIAL MINECRAFT BOOK

BEWARE

and his lamp. 'I will dig and get black
rock!' he says.

He trudges into the dim mine. He is not in a panic. Not one bit.

The path opens up wide. Lamps are lit on the walls, and tracks run off into the dark. 'They made all this,' says Fig Pig. 'And then they left it.' He trudges on past the tracks.

A chest sits at the edge of the path. Fig
Pig inspects it. Cash!
And a blade!

'I will just take this blade,' he says. 'It will keep me safe.' He grips
it and does not budge
for a bit. Then he walks
on fast.

A huge web! A big bug naps in the web.

Fig Pig must dodge
past it. Step, step,
step. He dodges the thick strands. The
bug does not budge.
Go, Fig Pig, go!

The path ends at a ledge. Hot red rock pops in the pit.

Fig Pig steps on the thin track at the edge. 'Do not look in the pit,' he says. He looks in the pit. Gulp!

Fig Pig dashes from the mine. Then he spots a red note by the exit. It says, 'Stop! Do not go in!' Fig Pig yells. He does not trudge. He runs and runs! He did not get black rock. But next time, he will check the red note, and then go in!

Do Not Go In

Fig Pig marches into a dark mine, sure he'll find the finest coal ever seen. He trudges past old tracks, grabs a shiny blade from a chest for safety, and dodges a huge sleeping bug guarding a sticky web. But at the edge of a narrow track over bubbling lava, will he keep his nerve, or will fright send him running for daylight? Created to align with the UFLI Foundations scope and sequence (Lesson 70: dge /j/), this book practices words like 'trudges', 'dodge', 'budge', 'ledge'.
